Aims

Current Research in Psychological Science (ISSN: 2959-3638) is an international academic journal published by Brilliance Publishing Limited, dedicated to advancing psychological science and deepening the understanding of human behavior, cognition, and experience. The journal provides a platform for psychologists, scholars, practitioners, and researchers to publish significant studies, exchange innovative perspectives, and contribute to the development of psychological knowledge and practice.

Adopting an interdisciplinary outlook, the journal welcomes research exploring the connections between psychology and related fields, including neuroscience, education, health, sociology, and technology. With a focus on theoretical advancement and practical relevance, it encourages contributions that connect psychological knowledge with real-world challenges. The journal also promotes international collaboration and cross-cultural perspectives, fostering scholarly dialogue across disciplines and contributing to the global advancement of psychological science.
